9 Petitioner, }
10 vs. }
11 Charles Ryan, et al., }
12 Respondents. }
13

14 Petitioner Robert William Dutcher, presently incarcerated at the Arizona State Prison - 15 Eyman Meadows Unit, in Florence, Arizona, has filed a Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus 16 under 28 U.S.C. § 2254. Pursuant to the Rules of Practice of the Court, this matter was 17 referred to Magistrate Judge Ferraro for Report and Recommendation. Before the Court are 18 the Petition (Dkt. 1), Respondents' Answer to Petition (Dkt. 7), Petitioner's pro se Reply 19 (Dkt. 13), and Petitioner's supplemental reply (Dkt. 14). The Magistrate Judge recommends 20 the District Court, after its independent review of the record, dismiss the petition on the 21 ground that it is time barred.
22

FACTUAL AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND
23

24 Petitioner was convicted, in absentia, on December 3, 1987, in the Superior Court of 25 Pima County of two counts of molestation of a child, six counts of sexual conduct with a 26 minor under 15, and one count of sexual abuse with a minor under 15. (Dkt. 7, Ex. B at 2.) 27 On May 10, 1988, he was sentenced to consecutive terms of seventeen years, twenty-eight 28 years, and seven life terms without release for thirty-five years. (Id., Ex. C.) Petitioner raised four claims on direct appeal: the trial court erred in admitting Petitioner's involuntary

1 statement; ineffective assistance of counsel at sentencing; the trial court erred by imposing 2 such a severe sentence; and the trial court erred in denying Petitioner's motion for directed 3 verdict. (Id., Exs. D, E.) The Arizona Court of Appeals denied Petitioner's appeal on 4 October 12, 1989. (Id., Ex. F.) Petitioner did not seek further review. (Dkt. 1 at 4.)

5 It appears Petitioner filed a Notice of Post-conviction Relief (PCR) on May 3, 2004.
 6 (See Dkt. 7 at 3; Dkt. 13-2 at 27-31.) On March 24, 2005, Petitioner filed a PCR petition 7 pursuant to Arizona Rule of Criminal Procedure 32. (Dkt. 7, Ex. G.) Petitioner raised one 8 claim in that petition – ineffective assistance of counsel (IAC) for failure to advise Petitioner 9 of his trial date, which cost him the opportunity to accept a plea offer. (Id. at 2.) On June 10 29, 2005, the PCR court denied relief on the merits. (Id., Ex. H.) Petitioner petitioned for 11 review of that decision to the Arizona Court of Appeals, which was granted. (Id., Exs. I, J.) 12 The court of appeals denied relief, finding the claim precluded under Arizona Rule of 13 Criminal Procedure 32.2(a)(3) for failure to raise it earlier. (Id., Ex. J.) Petitioner sought 14 review in the Arizona Supreme Court, which was summarily denied on January 5, 2007. (Id., 15 Exs. K, L.)

DISCUSSION

17 On January 4, 2008, Petitioner filed his present federal habeas petition. (Dkt. 1.) The 18 petition alleges the following claims: ineffective assistance of counsel for failing to advise 19 Petitioner of the trial date, which cost him the opportunity to accept a plea offer to a single 20 count with a sentencing range of twelve to twenty-two years; the state courts' summary 21 denial of his IAC claim without a hearing violated his right to due process.

Statute of Limitations and Statutory Tolling

23 The Antiterrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act (AEDPA) became effective on 24 April 24, 1996. Under the AEDPA, federal petitions for writ of habeas corpus filed by state 25 prisoners are governed by a one-year statute of limitations period. 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(1).
 26 The limitations period begins to run from the latest of:

- 27 (A) the date on which the judgment became final by the conclusion of direct review or the expiration of the time for seeking such review;
- 28 (B) the date on which the impediment to filing an application created

1 by State action in violation of the Constitution or laws of the United States is 2 removed, if the applicant was prevented from filing by such State action;

3 (C) the date on which the constitutional right asserted was initially 4 recognized by the Supreme Court, if the right has been newly recognized by 5 the Supreme Court and made retroactively applicable to cases on collateral 6 review; or

7 (D) the date on which the factual predicate of the claim or claims 8 presented could have been discovered through the exercise of due diligence.

9 Id.

10 In applying (d)(1)(A), the Court must assess when direct review of Petitioner's 11 conviction and sentences became final. The Arizona Court of Appeals denied review on 12 Petitioner's direct appeal on October 12, 1989, and his time to seek review in the Arizona 13 Supreme Court expired thirty days later, on Monday, November 13, 1989.¹ Ariz. R. Crim.
 14 P. 31.19. Thus, the judgment against Petitioner became final for purposes of § 2244(d)(1)(A) 15 on that date. See Hemmerle v. Schriro, 495 F.3d 1069, 1073-74 (9th Cir. 2007) (assessing 16 § 2244 finality in light of the Arizona rules), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 33 (2008); Wixom v.
 17 Washington, 264 F.3d 894, 898 (9th Cir. 2001).

18 Because Petitioner's convictions were final prior to the AEDPA, the statute of 19 limitations did not begin to run until the day after that statute was enacted, April 25, 1996.
 20 See Patterson v. Stewart, 251 F.3d 1243, 1246 (9th Cir. 2001). Thus, Petitioner had until 21 April 24, 1997, in which to file his petition. See id. Petitioner did not file his petition in this 22 Court until January 4, 2008; therefore, it was untimely under § 2244(d)(1)(A).

23 Petitioner contends his PCR petition was timely under state rules and, therefore, the 24 federal limitations period was statutorily tolled. See 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(2) (excepting from 25 federal limitations period the time during which a proper state PCR proceeding is pending).
 26 Petitioner is correct that, because he was sentenced prior to 1992, there was no time limit for 27 the filing of his first PCR petition in state court. (See Dkt. 7, Ex. J at 2 n.1.) However, his 28 argument still fails because a timely state petition filed after the expiration of the federal 29 limitations period does not reinitiate the federal period. See Ferguson v. Palmateer, 321 F.3d

¹ The thirty-day period expired on Saturday, November 11, 1989; therefore, Petitioner had until the following Monday to seek further review.

1 820, 823 (9th Cir. 2003). In Ferguson, the petitioner argued the one-year federal limitations 2 period should not apply because the state rules allowed two years to file for post-conviction 3 relief. Id. at 822. The court rejected petitioner's arguments, finding that petitioners seeking 4 federal relief must comply with the federal rules and it would be unfair for prisoners in 5 various states to be subject to different federal limitations periods. Id. at 823. Ferguson is 6 squarely on point. Petitioner's circumstances, in which state rules allowed him to wait 7 almost fifteen years before initiating a PCR proceeding, underscore the Ninth Circuit's 8 concerns about the inequity that would arise if the federal one-year statute of limitations was 9 not uniformly applied without reference to state rules. Id. Thus, Petitioner's 2004 PCR 10 proceeding had no impact on the 1997 expiration of the federal statute of limitations.

11 Petitioner contends he satisfies § 2244(d)(1)(B) – suspending the limitations period 12 while a State impediment precludes filing – because there were no reference materials 13 regarding the AEDPA available until after January 8, 2002. The evidence upon which 14 Petitioner relies is a memo written by Randy Howe and Greg McCarthy to Jim Morrow 15 advising that a copy of the AEDPA should be kept on file in the prison libraries. (Dkt. 13-3 16 at 33.) The memo indicates that the AEDPA was available in prison libraries until August 17 1997, at which time it was removed. (Id.) Petitioner's limitations period expired in April 18 1997, prior to the asserted removal of § 2244 from the libraries. Therefore, its removal was 19 not an impediment to timely filing. Further, the memo suggests, and Petitioner does not 20 argue otherwise, that the statute was available after January 8, 2002; Petitioner did not file 21 a federal petition within the year following its availability. Therefore, even if the time had 22 begun to run in January 2002, Petitioner's petition did not satisfy § 2244(d)(1)(B)'s 23 limitations period.

24 Petitioner also argues that he satisfies subsection D – limitations period begins when 25 factual predicate of claim discovered – because he was unable to obtain his legal file until 26 February 24, 2004. Based on the documents presented by Petitioner, and he does not argue 27 to the contrary, he did not begin to request a copy of his legal file until February 2001 (Dkt.
 28 13-2 at 68), eventually obtaining it in February 2004 (id. at 65). Section 2244(d)(1)(D)

1 begins to run from the time the factual predicate of a claim “could have been discovered 2 through the exercise of due diligence.” The requisite “diligence can be shown by prompt 3 action on the part of the petitioner as soon as he is in a position to realize that he has an 4 interest” in developing a possible avenue for relief. Johnson v. United States, 544 U.S. 295, 5 308, 310 (2005) (finding defendant not diligent because he delayed three years in seeking to 6 have a state court conviction vacated after it was used to enhance his federal sentence).
 7 Petitioner has known since prior to being sentenced that he was tried in absentia; thus, he had 8 an interest in developing a claim that his counsel failed to inform him of the trial date since 9 that time. Petitioner waited well over ten years before requesting the file; thus, Petitioner did 10 not act with due diligence to obtain the file. Further, Petitioner has not alleged what he 11 learned from reviewing his legal file that he had not or could not have previously discovered.
 12 Finally, even if a new one-year limitations period was triggered by the February 2004 receipt 13 of his legal file, and the period was statutorily tolled in May 2004 when Petitioner initiated 14 a PCR proceeding, more than two months elapsed prior to him filing his PCR petition and 15 another twelve months elapsed from the denial of the PCR petition and the filing of his 16 federal petition. Giving Petitioner all benefit of the doubt, he cannot satisfy (d)(1)(D).

17 Equitable Tolling

18 Respondents argue that, pursuant to Bowles v. Russell, 551 U.S. 205, 127 S. Ct. 2360 19 (2007), the AEDPA is not subject to equitable tolling. In Bowles, the Supreme Court held 20 the timely filing of an appeal in a civil case is a jurisdictional requirement. 127 S. Ct. at 21 2366. The Court reasoned that because federal statutes specify time limits on filing a notice 22 of appeal and on extending the notice-of-appeal period, Congress intended to preclude 23 appellate courts from exercising jurisdiction over otherwise legitimate cases when a certain 24 period of time had elapsed from final judgment. Id.

25 As set forth above, the AEDPA establishes statutory time limits on when a petitioner 26 may file a petition for writ of habeas corpus. 28 U.S.C. § 2244(d)(1). On two occasions, the 27 Supreme Court has denied certiorari on the issue of whether these limits are jurisdictional.
 28 See David v. Hall, 540 U.S. 815 (2003); Flanders v. Graves, 537 U.S. 1236 (2003). In 2007,

1 a few months prior to Bowles, the Supreme Court noted that it had never decided whether 2 equitable tolling was available with respect to the AEDPA's statute of limitations. After 3 Bowles, the Court cited an AEDPA case in holding that statutes of limitations are generally 4 not jurisdictional but affirmative defenses subject to waiver. John R. Sand & Gravel Co. v.
 5 United States, 128 S. Ct. 750, 753 (2008) (citing Day v. McDonough, 547 U.S. 198, 202 6 (2006)). Accordingly, whether the AEDPA is subject to equitable tolling remains an open 7 question. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals has found equitable tolling applicable to the 8 AEDPA post-Bowles. See Waldron-Ramsey v. Pacholke, 556 F.3d 1008, 1011 n. 2 (9th Cir.
 9 2009) (citing Diaz v. Kelly, 515 F.3d 149, 153-54 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 168
 10 (2008); Harris v. Carter, 515 F.3d 1051, 1054 n.4 (9th Cir.), cert. denied, 129 S. Ct. 397 11 (2008)).

12 This Court need not resolve the issue because, assuming equitable tolling remains 13 viable after Bowles, Petitioner does not satisfy the requirements for tolling. For equitable 14 tolling, a petitioner "bears the burden of establishing two elements: (1) that he has been 15 pursuing his rights diligently, and (2) that some extraordinary circumstance stood in his 16 way." Pace v. DiGuglielmo, 544 U.S. 408, 418 (2005) (citing Irwin v. Dep't of Veterans 17 Affairs, 498 U.S. 89, 96 (1990)). The threshold for equitable tolling is very high and it is 18 "unavailable in most cases." Miranda v. Castro, 292 F.3d 1063, 1066 (9th Cir. 2002) 19 (quoting Miles v. Prunty, 187 F.3d 1104, 1107 (9th Cir. 1999)).

20 Petitioner contends his diligence is evidenced by his timely direct appeal and his 21 lengthy attempts to obtain his counsel's file. The Court disagrees. More than ten years 22 elapsed between the denial of Petitioner's direct appeal in 1989 and his initial 2001 attempts 23 to obtain his legal file. This does not evince diligent pursuit of his rights.

24 Petitioner argues that the statutory arguments discussed above – lack of access to the 25 AEDPA and his counsel's files – constitute extraordinary circumstances warranting equitable 26 tolling. Because the AEDPA statute of limitations was available in the law library during 27 Petitioner's one-year limitations period and he did not attempt to obtain his legal file until 28 long after the limitations period had run, neither of those assertions constitute extraordinary

1 circumstances. See Gaston v. Palmer, 417 F.3d 1030, 1034 (9th Cir.) (requiring a causal 2 connection between “extraordinary circumstance” and failure to timely file), amended, 447 3 F.3d 1165 (9th Cir. 2006). Petitioner also argues as extraordinary circumstances his lack of 4 legal knowledge and ineffective counsel. Independent of Petitioner’s difficulty in obtaining 5 his legal file, which is addressed above, alleged ineffectiveness of counsel at some prior time 6 did not prevent Petitioner from timely filing in this Court; therefore, it does not warrant 7 equitable tolling. See id. Further, pro se status alone does not warrant equitable tolling, see 8 Roy v. Lampert, 465 F.3d 964, 970 (9th Cir. 2006), nor does “lack of legal sophistication,” 9 Raspberry v. Garcia, 448 F.3d 1150, 1154 (9th Cir. 2006).

10 Petitioner has not demonstrated an extraordinary circumstance prevented him from 11 timely filing nor that he diligently pursued his rights; therefore, he is not entitled to equitable 12 tolling.

13 The petition is untimely pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 2254(d)(1), and Petitioner has not 14 established entitlement to statutory or equitable tolling. Accordingly, the petition is time-15 barred.

16 RECOMMENDATION

17 Based on the foregoing, the Magistrate Judge recommends the District Court enter an 18 order DISMISSING the Petition for Writ of Habeas Corpus.

19 Pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(b), any party may serve and file written objections within 20 ten days of being served with a copy of the Report and Recommendation. If objections are 21 not timely filed, they may be deemed waived. The parties are advised that any objections 22 filed are to be identified with the following case number: CV-08-015-TUC-DCB.

23 DATED this 19th day of May, 2009.
